

2023 Judging Panel

GENERAL INFORMATION

The New Zealand Book Awards Trust Te Ohu Tiaki i Te Rau Hiringa, which governs the Ockham New Zealand Book Awards, is calling for expressions of interest in being a judge of the 2023 Awards from members of the public with relevant experience, and from the literature community. Suitable candidates may be authors, former publishers, academics, reviewers, critics, booksellers, librarians, and beyond. What is important is that they have:

- A deep knowledge and appreciation of New Zealand literature.
- Relevant experience and/or qualifications and a recognised standing in the field of adult literature.
- A wide reading practice, and the capacity to absorb and critically examine a large number of books in a relatively short timeframe.
- For certain categories, a strong appreciation of book design.
- No major conflicts of interest with books in contention.
- The ability and a commitment to work to the timelines required for the 2023 awards judging process.
- The availability to travel as required to judging panel meetings and to the awards ceremony in Auckland.

The Ockham New Zealand Book Awards offer four principal prizes each year: the Jann Medicott Acorn Prize for Fiction, the Mary and Peter Biggs Award for Poetry, the Booksellers Aotearoa New Zealand Award for Illustrated Non-Fiction and the General Non-Fiction Award.

The Judging of each of the four subject categories is undertaken by a panel of three judges with relevant expertise and experience in that subject. One of the three will be appointed as convenor.

Potential judges can either express interest directly or be nominated by members of the literature community and book industry. Individuals who have judged the Awards in prior years, including during the period in which they were known as the Montana New Zealand Book Awards and the NZ Post Book Awards, are welcome to apply.

Candidates will be selected by a panel made up of members of the New Zealand Book Awards Trust. Once selected, the panels will be well supported by the Awards Administrator.

All judges will be provided with a handbook and guidelines, but discussions are held independently of the Trust and its staff, who take no part in any deliberations apart from determining that all entries meet the criteria for eligibility.

The panel members are required to read all entries in their respective categories and select a longlist of up to 10 books and then a shortlist of four, from which the category winner is decided. Judges also select the book of a debut author in each category to receive a Crystal Arts Trust Best First Book Award. The Fiction panel is joined at the shortlist stage by an international judge.

Role of the Judging Panels

Each three-person judging panel has responsibility for:

- Working with the Awards Administrator to meet all judging deadlines.
- Making the final selection of category award longlist and shortlist finalists, and then the category winner (in the case of the fiction panel, with the input of an international judge).
- Making the final selection of winners for the Best First Book awards.
- Contributing to the written overviews for the Awards booklet and website, and category winner citations for Awards night and the website (see below).
- Attending the Awards ceremony.
- Providing written feedback via the convenor to the Awards Administrator about their experience of the judging process, and reflections on points for improvement.

Role of the Convenors of Judges

The convenor of each three-person judging panel has responsibility for:

- Establishing meeting times/venues with their fellow judges and actively working to meet the various judging deadlines.
- Actively guiding the judging process.
- Alerting the Awards Administrator if assistance is required from a te Reo Māori advisor to assess bilingual books (written in English and Māori)
- Liaising with the Awards Administrator and Publicist on administration and public relations questions.
- Providing media statements and doing interviews as required.
- Co-ordinating the writing of an 80-word overview of each title for the Awards finalists' booklet and Awards website.
- Co-ordinating the writing of an 80-word overarching comment on the category finalists for media release.
- Writing the 120-word citation (with input from fellow judges) for each category winner, and an 80-word citation for Best First Book winner to be read out during the awards ceremony; and editing those citations as required for the website.
- Delivering the judges' view and decision on stage at the Awards ceremony.
- Providing a comprehensive written report to the Awards Administrator on behalf of their panel about their experience of the judging process, and reflections on points for improvement.

Role of Awards Administrator

It is the Awards Administrator's role to support and assist the judges in the judging process and to ensure deadlines for the judging process are met. While the Awards Administrator may attend judging meetings and brief the judges, they have no involvement in the judging decisions. Judges may call for advice or assistance at any time during the judging process and should direct all communication through the Awards Administrator.
